

Special Note: Given the Bank of Canada’s August 8, 2025 update on its payment service provider registry, this note is to clarify the scope of payment service providers that will meet the amended definition of a Professional Trustee under the CDIC Act while the Bank completes its review of initial registration applications.

As of September 8, 2025, a payment service provider (“PSP”), as that term is defined under section 2 of the Retail Payment Activities Act (“RPAA”), meets the amended definition of a Professional Trustee under the CDIC Act if:

- (1) The Bank of Canada has registered the PSP under section 25 of the RPAA, or
- (2) The PSP submitted an application for registration with the Bank of Canada before September 8, 2025 in accordance with section 104 of the RPAA and has not been refused registration. The applicant PSP must have performed the retail payment activity of holding end-user funds during the transition period, as that period is defined under section 103 of the RPAA, and as of September 8, 2025, be holding end-user funds in trust in a trust account that is not used for any other purpose.

For greater certainty, a PSP does not meet the amended definition of a Professional Trustee if 1) the PSP has been refused registration under the RPAA by the Bank of Canada, or 2) the PSP applies for registration on or after September 8, 2025 and has not been registered.
